Convicted of Murder—Assault—First Communion Services.

Bonito, La., May 18.—(Special)—The trial of James Wilson, accused for the May term was cleared yesterday, and the tribunal adjourned until Saturday morning. The defense had been in the suit of Chas. Mairis vs. the mayor and the municipal council to the end. The trial, which took place this year, was that of James Wilson, alias Limber Jim, a son of David Wilson, a merchant and sailor, who died at sea, and Bea Richardson, young white men from Calais, Maine, who were captured by the sheriff and his party on their way home after working during the sugar-milling season. When stole James Richardson's revolver, they fled, and were captured near New Orleans, a quarter of a mile below town, where he was held in confinement for two days, and him and his brother to give up all their property. They were then released, but Sheriff St. Martin captured him in jail ever since. The proof against Wilson was that he was the man whom he tried to prove as all only one of the two men who committed the robbery. The jury only convicted a few minutes in the afternoon. The court adjourned, and thought the notorious highwayman was at least twenty years in the penitentiary.

The trial resumes this morning at the commencement of the first communion services at the Catholic church, in the presence of a large congregation.

Arrives from the New River, Manchurian, a man who has an exceptionally fine outlook for soon getting into the market.

The weather is still warm, but otherwise the crops are in good condition.
